Travels Through Literature
Kellogg Elementary School in Huntington, WV USA

This lesson was created to use across elementary grade levels with different pieces of literature used within those grades.

Objectives:
Students will make inferences about a place within the literature. Students will compare and contrast two real places. Students will use cause and effect to predict how changes in the setting could change the story.

2 Teachers
66 Students
320 Comments

C says:
this is just like peace park in the book.

J says:
This is a big city just like it said in the heartbreaking story, Sudako and the Thousand Paper Cranes.

J says:
the state capital dome is gold just like it said in the book I read, Missing May.